DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-7, 11-18, and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Morton (US 6,145,260) in view of Brockman (US 5,979,123).

Morton '260 shows anchoring device (10, 10a, 10b) comprises of a fiber composite material (col. 6, lines 3-47) fixedly attached by bonding mechanism to a structural member (W) which is an unreinforced wall. The fiber composite material is a flexible, uncured sheet 80 (col. 12, lines 50-67, col. 13, lines 1-25) or it can be a rigid preformed plated (col. 6, lines 9-10). Morton does not show a second portion of the anchoring device fixedly attached to a base member which is a foundation/footing, and anchoring device further comprises an angle member having a first portion and a second portions are substantially perpendicular to each other.

Brockman show a sheet material (44) made of plastic having a first portion (25) attached to a structural member (10,12) and a second portion (29, 32, 34) fixed attached to a foundation/footing (14) to reinforce/protect the foundation, and sheet material (44) having a first 29, a second 32 portions are perpendicular to each other (fig. 1). At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to modify Morton '260 to extend the anchoring device/fiber composite material into a second portion which perpendicular to a first portion and fixedly attach this second portion to the foundation/footing to reinforce/protect the foundation. To secure this second portion by bonding mechanism to the foundation/footing would have been obvious as disclosed in Morton '260 to simplify and speed up the attaching process.

3. Claims 8-10 and 19-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Morton (US 6,145,260) in view of Brockman (US 5,979,123) and Adams (US 4,903,450).

Morton '260 and Brockman '123 disclose the structural elements for the anchoring device as stated. Morton and Brockman do not disclose expressly the base/footing member further comprises an internal wall defining a groove, and the second portion of each anchoring device is at least partially disposed within the groove, an elongated member disposed within the groove.

Adams teaches concrete footer block and foundation system comprising a base for footer blocks 10 having internal groove 18a, 18b, an anchoring device 30 is partially disposed within the groove along with reinforcement rods or elongated members 24 disposed within the groove. (See figs. 4-5). At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to modify Morton '260 and Brockman '123 to deposit the second portion of the anchoring device/fiber composite material with Adams '450 for footer block having internal groove and elongated members disposed with the groove. The motivation for doing so would have been to provide better securement and enhance the strength for the footing/foundation.

4. Claims 23-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Morton (US 6,145,260) in view of Brockman (US 5,979,123) and Adams (US 4,903,450).

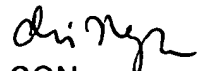

Morton '260, Brockman '123 and Adams '450 disclose the structural elements for the anchoring device as stated except for the method of construction for anchoring a structural member of a building, examiner considers this to be the obvious method of setting up the device of claims.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
